

AUTO GUESSED SIDE OF BRIDGE; WOMAN IS KILLED

Mother of Minister at Fort Defiance Is Victim of Deplorable Accident While Motor-ing Near Gallup.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)
Gallup, N. M., May 15.—One of the most appalling accidents that Gallup has ever experienced occurred Friday evening about 5 o'clock, when an automobile turned turtle over the side of a bridge, killing Mrs. Ruth Black and seriously injuring G. U. Manning of Fort Defiance.

Mrs. Black had just arrived in town this morning from the state of Illinois and was on her way to Fort Defiance to make her home with her son, Rev. Alexander Black, who is stationed at that point. Arrangements had been made by Mrs. Black to be taken to the fort in one of the Russell cars upon her arrival, but G. U. Manning arrived in town that morning to transact business and changed the plan and Mrs. Black decided to wait and go out to the fort with him when he returned in the evening.

The car left here at about 5 o'clock in the evening. At a distance of about three miles out of town at the foot of a steep hill and just around a sharp curve is located a bridge. It was at this bridge that the accident occurred. Manning was driving at a moderate rate of speed, but the road is narrow and graded somewhat at this point, and the car skidded a little and hit the railing of the bridge and tumbled over the side into the ditch, which is about ten feet deep.

Pinned Under Car.
Mr. Manning, who was driving the car, and Mrs. Black, who was riding alone in the rear seat, were pinned under the car. A third person, who was in the car was Dr. J. R. Henneberger, a young government physician who was in town on business for the day. He was riding in the front seat with the driver and resisting what was about to happen, jumped from the car and landed safe on the opposite side of the ditch, suffering only a few minor bruises. The car turned completely over and both of the two other occupants were pinned under it. The doctor succeeded in lifting the car and landed out. Mrs. Black, who was in a helpless condition, Manning was able to assist himself somewhat although badly bruised about the body and lower limbs.

The young doctor made a hasty examination of the injured woman and realized that she was in a dangerous condition. An Indian woman drove up at about that time and the injured woman was loaded into the wagon and brought to La Petite hospital here. An examination upon her arrival there only a few minutes after the accident occurred revealed that the woman was dead. When first taken from under the overturned car, the woman spoke a few words, saying that she was fearfully injured.

Had Come West to Live.
Mrs. Black, a silver-haired woman about 70 years of age, was going out to Fort Defiance to make her home with her son. He had just completed a house and its furnishing and was anxiously awaiting the arrival of his mother.

The car in which the party was riding was heavily loaded, as it contained besides the three persons a trunk belonging to Mrs. Black and other luggage that she was bringing with her. Being a frail woman, Mrs. Black was not able to assist herself in escaping from falling under the heavy car. Her head was badly crushed and she sustained other internal injuries.

Funeral services will be held from the Rollie chapel Sunday and burial will take place either here or at Fort Defiance.

RICH VALLEY TO REALIZE HOPES OF A RAILROAD

Splendid Livestock Country to Be Opened Up by Line to Connect With T. & P. at Van Horn, Texas.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)
Ottawa, N. M., May 15.—This valley is about to realize the hopes and dreams of a railroad. Lying sixty miles from Van Horn, Texas, the nearest railway station, and about 100 miles from El Paso, the principal supply point, and the same distance from Alamogordo, the county seat, the business of its citizens has been somewhat handicapped by reason of having to make the long drive of livestock and the haul of its products.

"There has been little publicity in connection with this railroad, but it is now a certainty—in fact about fifteen miles of the roadway already has been put in readiness and some of the steel has been laid. The contract calls for not less than five miles of roadway to be built each month. The line will connect with the Texas & Pacific railroad at Van Horn and later will form a junction with G. H. & S. A. The venture is being financed by Minneapolis capitalists.

Very Badly Isolated.
As big as New Mexico is, this is one of the last districts to remain so long and so far away from railroad facilities. The mail has to be carried to Van Horn, a distance of sixty miles, in a hack. There is no direct mail line to the county seat at Alamogordo, and none to El Paso. Until the general use of the automobile, it required two to three days to make the trip to Alamogordo. One prosperous ranchman who recently completed a commodious and modern home said that he spent three years hauling the materials from El Paso.

Notwithstanding its isolation the people of the valley have been successful in their undertakings and are prosperous. There are many fine cattle ranches and the soil is fertile and equally suited to agriculture. One ranchman, W. T. Brownfield, who recently completed the modern home, has a pumping plant to supply water for cattle. The water in this district is found at depths varying from twenty to sixty feet, making pumping for irrigation a practicable and economical matter. A large tract of land lying about six miles south of Orange is now in cultivation, with a big pumping plant furnishing the water for irrigation.

CHILD IS BITTEN BY RATTLES; PRESENCE OF MIND SAVES HIS LIFE

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)

The rattlesnake was found by the father and he immediately took a string and wrapped it tightly around the toe and ran to his home. This thoughtful act saved his life, for it was nearly half an hour before he was under the doctor's care.

SAYS SPIES INFEST WHOLE UNITED STATES

(BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEASED WIRE)
Chicago, May 15.—That the United States is infested by spies was asserted by speakers at the national convention of the naval and military order of the Spanish-American war held today. The spy question was raised in the discussion of a resolution by Major Edward Schuler, of Connecticut, calling upon public men to cease "blasting" the reputation of the United States as a power. He said when weak points in the country's defenses were found the proper authorities should be notified instead of the administration being held up to ridicule.

Opponents to the resolution said the country was so filled with spies that it was of no consequence what public speakers said about the country's defenses.

Colonel Milton J. Foreman, commander-in-chief of the First Cavalry, Illinois National Guard, was elected commander-in-chief for the coming year.

BELIEVES BRYAN WILL PREVENT ANY ACTUAL WAR

Great Faith Attaches to Strong Proclivities of Secretary of State to Preserve Peace for United States.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)
Chicago, May 15.—"There will be no war between the United States and Germany, in my opinion," said an eminent citizen of Chicago this morning. He takes a view of administration policies decidedly different from those of most citizens of the United States, and his ideas are entitled to respect, on account of his many years of experience in politics, the high positions he has held and his knowledge of the men now at the head of national affairs.

Many people have said that William Jennings Bryan is merely an ornamental appendage to the administration, that he was placed in the high office he now holds because he made Woodrow Wilson president of the United States, against Champ Clark. "That view is altogether wrong," says the authority quoted. "William Jennings Bryan is a man of strong will—stubborn to the last degree. Being, first of all, a man of peace, and having adopted the pacifist ideas of the time, he will not only oppose anything warlike, but will absolutely prevent any beligerent action."

If this statement had come from a casual thinker or a person lacking familiarity with the inner things of politics, it might have passed without attention, but the testimony of the man uttering these opinions has a standing that cannot be ignored. Nor is this commentator a close personal friend of Bryan, in the intimate sense. Politically, he is an opponent.

The people in this city who want to drop a word into the ear of the president are legion. Unquestionably a great many personal dispatches are going forward, including not merely those of critics or angry people, but suggestions from men versed in statecraft. The administration has invited such communications, but perhaps the average citizen is inclined to smile at one who responds to such an invitation, thinking that that man has too high an idea of the value of his own opinion. A man who has held high governmental places was questioned on this point today.

"These suggestions are helpful in some instances," he replied. "A government officer has his head plunged in a great mass of papers, trying to work out some problem. He is likely to narrow himself down to mere technicalities, or to make some grievous error, for sheer lack of freshness in his own thinking. A wise word from a friendly source works wonders in such a case sometimes. Help your rulers by suggestions. They want to hear from the people, particularly the wisest folk, for it is their business to carry out the will of the people." This is a reminder of a statement by Frank R. Vanderlip, when he was assistant secretary of the treasury. It was part of his business to go around the country and learn things in his own thinking. A wise word from the long-distance telephone to the treasury department. His attention was called to some errors that had crept into certain treasury statistics.

"Why didn't you tell us of it at the time," he asked.

"Oh, it was only a few figures and not worth while," was the reply. "There are many things in our work that, naturally, we do not discover. Somebody from the outside must discover them and it is the duty of that somebody immediately to call attention to them. This is true of great things and small, and I wish that you and everybody else would assume an attitude of helpfulness in this way." Much more in these terrible times needs the citizen to help his rulers. If there be a ton of chaff in the letters and telegrams there will also be at least a few grains of wheat.

BUSINESS NOW IS ABLE TO STAND SERIOUS SHOCK

(BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEASED WIRE)
New York, May 15.—The effect in this country's foreign relations was naturally the paramount issue in this week's stock market. The open and unfettered state of the New York market was evidenced by the boldness of operations on the short side, which was indicated by the circulation of alarming rumors and the partial recovery when a peaceful settlement found suggestions. The building up of this uncovered requirement supplies a technical source of strength for the market in the event of further shock.

The extreme care which has been manifested by business and enterprise is recognized now as having been prompted by the danger of just such episodes as now threaten. This precautionary measure is expected to yield corresponding safeguards against the necessity of retrenchment and liquidation in the event of a rupture with Germany. Opinions differ over the extent to which speculative deflation in the stock market itself might be called for.

Confidence in the resources of the money market was demonstrated in the completion of subscriptions to the Pennsylvania railroad and Argentine government bond offerings. Time money hardened slightly. The dip in government bonds was not deep.

A STUDY IN SCARLET

The cause of the committal of 43 per cent of criminals to penal institutions in one year in this country was due to sheer laziness. This represents the percentage of tramps sent to our jails. The tramps of tomorrow will come from the children of today. If every child from its earliest years is taught industry and economy—if every parent who reads this will give their children a Bank Account—the Tramp problem would be rapidly solved. No one ever heard of a Tramp with a Bank Account.

The car and hack collided, completely demolishing the hack. Fortunately the team and the passengers escaped injury, with the exception of slight bruises. The car was damaged only slightly.
